Where Trouble Was Brewing

JEFF GERRITT, editor of the Palestine Herald-Press, won the 2020 Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing in May. He received the award for a series of editorials revealing medical neglect and horrific deaths of county jail inmates in the paper's own Anderson County and other county jails in rural Texas, where inmates are awaiting trial.

Gerritt had stepped out for a cup of coffee before word came that he had won one of journalism's highest honors. The Herald-Press publisher greeted an astonished Gerritt with the news in the newspaper parking lot when he returned. "I just broke down and fell to the ground," he said.

Thank you for the brilliant story on Georgia O’Keeffe by Chris Burrows [Palo Duro Love Letters, July 2020]. It is great with the large photos and timely information about the new book. Pam LeBlanc’s decision that she is indeed a Texan [No Longer a Yankee, July 2020] may be a bit premature. Stating that her “personal vehicle is a bicycle, with a Fiat Spyder convertible as a backup” tends to make me believe she is an Austinite rather than a Texan.

Discovered! Unopened Bag of 138-Year-Old Morgan Silver Dollars

Unopened for 138 Years!

Coin experts amazed by “Incredible Opportunity”

The Morgan Silver Dollar is the most popular and iconic vintage U.S. coin. They were the Silver Dollars of the Wild West, going on countless untold adventures in dusty saddlebags across the nation. Finding a secret hoard of Morgans doesn't happen often—and when it does, it's a big deal.

How big? Here's numismatist, author and consultant to the Smithsonian® Jeff Garrett:

“It's very rare to find large quantities of Morgan Silver Dollars, especially in bags that have been sealed... to find several thousand Morgan Silver Dollars that are from the U.S. Treasury Hoards, still unopened, is really an incredible opportunity.”

-Jeff Garrett

But where did this unique hoard come from? Read on...

Morgans from the New Orleans Mint

In 1859, Nevada's Comstock Lode was discovered, and soon its rich silver ore made its way across the nation, including to the fabled New Orleans Mint, the only U.S. Mint branch to have served under the U.S. government, the State of Louisiana and the Confederacy. In 1882, some of that silver was struck into Morgan Silver Dollars, each featuring the iconic “O” mint mark of the New Orleans Mint. Employees then placed the freshly struck coins into canvas bags...

The U.S. Treasury Hoard

Fast-forward nearly 80 years. In the 1960s, the U.S. government opened its vaults and revealed a massive store of Morgan Silver Dollars—including full, unopened bags of “fresh” 1882-O Morgan Silver Dollars. A number of bags were secured by a child of the Great Depression—a southern gentleman whose upbringing showed him the value of hard assets like silver. He stashed the unopened bags of “fresh” Morgans away, and there they stayed...

The Great Southern Treasury Hoard

That is, until another 50 years later, when the man's family finally decided to sell the coins—still in their unopened bags—which we secured, bag and all! We submitted the coins to respected third-party grading service Numismatic Guaranty Corporation (NGC), and they agreed to honor the southern gentleman by giving the coins the pedigree of the “Great Southern Treasury Hoard.”

These gorgeous 1882-O Morgans are as bright and new as the day they were struck and bagged 138 years ago. Coins are graded on a 70-point scale, with those graded at least Mint State-60 (MS60) often referred to as “Brilliant Uncirculated” or BU. Of all 1882-O Morgans struck, LESS THAN 1% have earned a Mint State grade. This makes these unopened bags of 1882-O Morgans extremely rare, certified as being in BU condition—nearly unheard of for coins 138 years old.

Don't Miss This Rare Opportunity—Order Now!

Regular 1882-O Morgans sell elsewhere for as much as $133, and that's without the original brilliant shine these “fresh” 138-year-old coins have, without their special NGC hoard designation, and without their ability to tell their full, complete story from the Comstock Lode all the way to your collection.

Given the limited quantity of coins available from this historic hoard, we must set a strict limit of five coins per household. Call quickly to secure yours today as supplies are sure to sell out quickly!

REEL MOMENTS

Film trails guide cinephiles through a slice of Texas' silver screen history

Giant's outsize reputation precedes it. The 1956 movie's 201-minute running time, wide-open West Texas landscape and generations-spanning timeline all connote epic. The film, based on Edna Ferber's book of the same name, also garnered its director an Oscar. Despite that accolade, and the film's nominations for a passel of others, some present-day viewers are wary.

"I show this to my graduate students, who expect to hate it, and they wind up—I don't want to say they love it—but they wind up being amazed by this movie," says Tom Schatz, author and film professor at the University of Texas at Austin. He acknowledges the movie's challenging running time and its parallel cultural heft. "In its own way, it's an extremely progressive movie," he says, that influenced the perception of Texas as "more nuanced, more sophisticated, and more oriented toward Mexico and the Southwest."

The Texas Film Commission includes Giant on its Texas Classics Trail, one of the self-guided tours it offers from which cinephiles can build itineraries of film production sites statewide. Since 1971, the film commission has supported the state as a production hub by connecting film-makers with locations, staff, grants and other resources. Through the choose-your-own-adventure setup of its film trails, the TFC encourages movie fans to explore Texas' silver screen history while supporting local communities and economies.

The making of Giant accomplished that latter aim, according to Vicki Barge, general manager of Marfa's Hotel Paisano, a stop on the trail and where the movie's cast stayed for the first two weeks of production. "At the time it was filmed, it was this huge shot in the arm for Marfa," she says. "There were four hotels in town, and cast and crew filled every room."

Even after its famous guests had decamped to private residences nearby, the Paisano remained a hangout. "They took a lot of meals together here, even after they were not living here," says Barge. The U-shaped bar at the hotel's restaurant was at that time a lunch counter. Lined with windows at perpendicular angles, it's easy to imagine the film's stars—Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and James Dean among them—lingering there in a desert light-filled inverse of Edward Hopper's Nighthawks.

Giant cast photos today line the hotel's hallways, a primer for the uninitiated, who can watch the movie in full in a quiet corner of the gift shop. It's an opportunity at least some guests avail themselves of. "They don't often sit through the entire show but will watch for a while," Barge says. "It's a long movie!"

Still, "it's got its moments," according to Schatz, "where it's getting at the human element in a pretty touching way." The silent, somber homecoming of a Mexican American veteran of World War II; an underdog's insouciant wave as he exits a meeting; a woman's acidly articulated response to being shut out of a conversation about politics; and the film's parting look at two infants, whose contrasting skin tones don't preclude the sharing of a playpen and a lineage in 1950s Texas, despite the scene's discordant use of an epithet. "What it's doing with race and class and gender is pretty remarkable," Schatz says.

Elizabeth Taylor, foreground, on the set of Giant. The film's Reata Ranch and mansion facade are in the background.

SELENA

A trailblazer herself, Selena Quintanilla Pérez inspired the eponymous 1997 biopic on the Texas Classics Trail. And though it cites Corpus Christi’s Swantner Park, the waterfront backdrop for a scene in Selena, trail-goers can veer from the official path to the coastal city’s Selena Museum and bayside Mirador de la Flor to learn about the singer, who was murdered at 23 in 1995.

At the bilevel mirador, whose name translates to “view-point of the flower,” a bronze likeness of Selena stands, accompanied by narration about the barrier-breaking Tejano artist, interspersed with snippets of Como la Flor. The song was one of Selena y los Dinos’ first U.S. hits and has inspired a swath of genre-bridging covers from artists including country performer Kacey Musgraves and indie duo Dracula. The cumbia’s effervescence almost obscures its narrator’s lament, which likens the end of a love affair to a dying flower.

A performance of Como la Flor in Selena marks the sole instance in Jennifer Lopez’s portrayal of the artist in which Lopez sings, the song’s first few words only, in a scene where her character must calm the crowd at an overcapacity outdoor venue, with the integrity of the band’s stage threatened.

A different moment in the film can be experienced vicariously at the Selena Museum. A studio in which Lopez’s Selena records in the movie—and where Selena herself recorded the song Dreaming of You—is housed at the museum. The studio’s acoustic panels are the same ones that appear in the film, in a scene punctuated with a simple request: “Hey, Dad, pizza!”

Selena’s Porsche, which has a cameo in the movie, is on display at the museum, along with her Grammy—the first awarded to a female Tejano artist for best Mexican American album. Outfits rendered iconic as markers of specific performances are displayed, along with clothing designs sketched by Selena.

A less-trafficked corner of the museum bears a collage of Selena snapshots. In many, she’s dressed casually and wears little or no makeup. Her smile radiates joy. In conjunction with Selena, the images hint at the person behind the performer. They also gesture to a lyric in Como la Flor: “Cómo me duele.”

How it hurts.

BONNIE AND CLYDE

Art imitates life again on the Texas Classics Trail, albeit several hours north and three decades earlier. Pilot Point's town square is home to the Farmers and Merchants Bank building, where a robbery scene from Bonnie and Clyde was filmed. To commemorate its spell in the limelight, the town north of Dallas hosts an annual Bonnie and Clyde Days Festival, which includes a reenactment of the scene.

Wayne Purser, a longtime member of CoServ, an electric cooperative in Corinth, coordinates, performs in and corals volunteers for the scene's annual reprise. Sometimes the wrangling requires some straight talk. In 2019 a prospective Clyde showed up to audition with long hair and a beard. Given the look's incongruity with hairstyles popular in the 1930s, when the movie is set, Purser put it plainly: "Dude, that's not gonna work." The man returned, less hirsute, and clinched the role, earning praise from Purser for his acting chops.

Purser plays the town sheriff in the reenactment, which is rife with antique vehicles, weapons that fire blanks, and actors and spectators in period dress. Whereas the movie scene occurs in and outside of the bank building, the reenactment satellites the Richardsonian Romanesque structure that today appears essentially identical to how it looks in the 1967 film.

Though the actual pair of outlaws never robbed Farmers and Merchants Bank, which closed during the Depression, the site doesn't want for history. The building dates to 1896 and has been home to Farmers and Merchants Gallery, a purveyor of antiques and art, since 1975. The space's erstwhile identity shines through occasionally. Marly McCullough, the gallery's manager, has found century-old checks tucked away in drawers used by the bank's tellers. "The oldest one I've come across was from 1906," she says. "I have a ton of those that I have kept."

Other handwritten finds have also popped up. A visitor in her 60s came across a book from her childhood. She knew it was hers because she had written her name in it, perhaps around the time a movie about a ragtag group on the lam was leaving its imprint on Pilot Point.

The alchemy of those moments echoes the power of movies to transport. "To me, it's magical. Like once I step inside there, it's another world, and the outside world is almost put on hold for a while," McCullough says. "It's my favorite place in the world."

TOP Warren Beatty and Faye Dunaway played the title characters in 1967's Bonnie and Clyde.

ABOVE The gang races out of Pilot Point's Farmers and Merchants Bank building in a scene from the movie.

Boyhood is a different kind of movie. It follows its actors over 12 years as they age, change and criss-cross the state, then distills that footage into a 165-minute panorama of a fractured Texas family, moored in love, figuring it out as they go. Though its title implies a focus on a single character, the movie offers a naturalistic depiction of the interiority and ecology of a post-divorce family, anchored by Patricia Arquette’s Oscar-winning portrayal of single parenthood. The film is included on the Texas Film Commission’s Richard Linklater Trail, which guides visitors to seven Boyhood sites in Central, Southeast and West Texas.

From its second year of production in 2003 through Boyhood’s 2013 completion, Matt Lankes worked as the film’s still photographer, capturing behind-the-scenes photos of cast and crew. As he was shooting those images, Lankes conducted a parallel photography project on the film’s set: a series of black-and-white portraits of the movie’s four main actors that culminated in his book Boyhood: Twelve Years on Film.

“It was like we became a family over the years,” Lankes says. “It was always a wonderful reunion for the three to five days that we would shoot each year.” The portraits he made suspend time and mark its passage for each of Lankes’ subjects. “We all were watching each other get older,” Lankes says, “and it was amazing.”

The closing scenes of Boyhood were filmed in West Texas in October 2013. Originally intended to be filmed in Big Bend National Park, a 16-day shutdown of the federal government scrambled those plans and diverted the movie’s cast and crew to Big Bend Ranch State Park. Even a cursory look at the film’s final few moments, backlit by a violet and pink sky, show that the finished product didn’t suffer from the ad hoc change in locale.

“Thankfully, you know, that part of our state is so wonderful,” Lankes says. The park’s otherworldly rock formations at its Hoodoos Trail appear in the movie, along with Closed Canyon, whose soaring walls approximate hiking in a natural cathedral.

Boyhood’s protagonist, Mason, college-age at this point in the film, meanders through the canyon with a trio of new friends near the film’s end. “It’s just a beautiful scene—they’re in a real moment, and it’s just kids doing what kids do,” Lankes says. “The landscape is irreplaceable.” ■

'Tis Always the Season

Lone Star Santas deliver joy when and where there is a need

SANTA CLAUS LIVES IN TEXAS. Actually, hundreds of Santa Clauses do, and they spread cheer all year long through a group called Lone Star Santas.

"It's a calling," says Gene Goetz of San Antonio, a member of Pedernales Electric Cooperative. He got his first Santa gig in 1981 for a twins club where his boys participated. "I bought a suit and a fake beard, and it was a lot of fun," he says. "I did that for a few years and then started doing a lot of charity work." In 2014, Goetz took his first role as a professional Santa Claus at San Antonio's Ingram Park Mall. That's when he heard about Lone Star Santas.

One of the organization's co-founders, Jim Fletcher of Cypress—whose voicemail says, "Apparently, I'm off feeding the reindeer or packing toys or helping Mrs. Claus bake cookies"—became a Santa somewhat by accident. "My then-fiancée, Madge, invited me to a homeowners association meeting, where we learned that their usual Santa was ill," Fletcher says. "I didn't have a beard then, but I did have the girth. They asked me if I could be Santa, and I said sure, why not? I bought a suit and a book on how to be a Santa, dressed up, did the gig and fell in love with it."

When Fletcher and Madge married the following June, Madge walked down the aisle to the tune of Here Comes Santa Claus rather than the traditional Here Comes the Bride. In 2007 Fletcher and fellow Santa Gene Clayton decided to start Lone Star Santas. They welcome any Santa, Mrs. Claus, elf, reindeer herder or other Texan with the spirit—counting more than 400 members today.

After an EF5 tornado hit Joplin, Missouri, in 2011, Fletcher rounded up a bunch of members, collected toy donations and drove to Joplin to hand them out. The expedition inspired the group's ongoing mission, Convoy of Toys.

"When disaster strikes, we bring love, hope and joy, and a big Santa hug along with trailers full of toys," Goetz says.

"We go wherever houses get destroyed and kids are displaced and lose their toys. After the [Hurricane] Harvey flood in Houston, we went into the shelters. Everyone is sad, then a few Santas walk in and the entire mood changes."

The group also participates in the Belton Fourth of July parade each year, with many Santas wearing country-western-style suits. They attend a dinner with the Temple Elks Lodge and visit the area children's hospital and veterans facility. "The vets love us," Fletcher says. "We give them a stuffed toy and an American flag, and it brightens their day. And it brightens our day to see their reaction."

Karen Stagner, who works with the Elks Lodge to arrange the Fourth of July parade, says the Lone Star Santas are a hit wherever they go. "It's just a tremendous group," she says, "and some of the most caring people I've ever met."

Goetz says it takes a special heart to be a Santa. "You can go to all the classes and conventions you want, but if being a good Santa isn't in your heart, it isn't going to matter," he says. "People think it is easy, but you have to know how to talk to kids."

Even though 8 in 10 Santas bleach their hair white, Goetz's is naturally that way. His beard and belly are real, too. “The more you look real,” he says, “the more you have kids saying they met the real Santa.”

That reality is not an inexpensive proposition, says member Dennis Queen. “I have about $4,000 in each suit and have three or four of them,” he says. Queen and his wife, Jane, a Mrs. Claus, relocate from Kerrville to San Antonio in a motor home each Christmas season.

All Lone Star Santas are volunteers. They pay for their own gas, hotel stays and meals on convoys. “Every penny donated to Lone Star Santas stays in it; none of it goes to our members,” Goetz says.

Why go to all the trouble? “It’s important for kids to believe in Santa, to have something to believe in,” he says. “We try to make kids grow up too quick now. A lot of people say it is a calling, and I’m starting to believe it. I’ll probably be buried in my Santa suit.”

The organization sponsors at least one “Santa school” in Texas every year to help teach members the ropes. Jane Queen says she and Dennis also learn a lot from other participants. “Santas are so smart and willing to share their craft,” she says.

“This is who I’ve become, all year long,” Dennis Queen says. “I think I’ve become a different person because of it. Our Christmas tree is up all year long.”

Jane Queen says that when the couple goes out, people regularly call them Santa and Mrs. Claus. “We wouldn’t trade it for anything—meeting the other Santas, the friendships we’ve developed,” she says.

Fletcher agrees that being Santa is a calling. “Once I put on the red suit and walk into a store or restaurant, invariably someone stops me and wants to get a picture with Santa,” he says. When a child says “Hi,” Fletcher explains, all of the attention goes to that child. He appreciates the smiles on every face when he leaves a restaurant because those smiles mean that the people forget about things that are going on and just enjoy a moment.

“I can’t get over what we can do,” he says, “Our brand is love, hope and joy. There’s just a joy to being Santa.” ■

Changes

DAVID BOWIE COULD have written his song Changes for our current time. The chorus, “Ch-Ch-Changes, turn and face the strange,” often seems appropriate these days. We are all adapting to change, and Houston County Electric Cooperative is no exception. In October we will host a virtual annual meeting for the first time in our history.

First and foremost we want you to be safe. We did not believe it was prudent to host our traditional annual meeting. However, the annual meeting is a vital part of cooperative participation and governance. You are the members and owners of Houston County EC, and we will continue to inform you about the business of your cooperative through a virtual format October 29.

Nothing will replace a good in-person conversation. We will miss visiting with you and sharing a catfish dinner. We will miss mingling in the tent, allowing you the opportunity to meet with our vendors and gather information about what we do on a daily basis and why. Most of all we will miss meeting you face to face. We enjoy meeting you, where we both have an opportunity to meet the person behind the voice when you call us and you get to see the people that go out to restore your power.

While the 2020 Houston County EC Annual Meeting can't deliver the in-person smiles of previous meetings, it will deliver the same valuable information about your cooperative's business.

Member participation, along with education, training and information, are two of the cooperative principles we fulfill through the annual meeting. While an online format will not deliver the same experience, we will continue to carry out the principles of our cooperative roots by providing a platform to exchange information and share about our business and our future.

We will strive to create an engaging online format. We will answer questions submitted to us and provide the same valuable information about the business of your cooperative.

Hopefully 2021 will allow us an opportunity to meet in person. For now, like you, we will adapt to the changes and make the best of it. Stay safe and watch for additional information in the October issue of Texas Co-op Power about how you can participate in our virtual annual meeting. ■

Houston County EC Bylaws Revision

THE FOLLOWING BYLAWS revision has been approved by the Houston County Electric Cooperative Board of Directors. The amendment was made to allow the annual meeting to be conducted virtually while protecting member voting rights. A complete copy of Houston County EC's bylaws can be obtained online at houstoncountyelec.com.

SECTION 3.1. The Cooperative shall hold an annual meeting of the Members and may hold a special meeting of the Members (collectively or individually, "Members' Meeting"). The Cooperative may hold a Members' Meeting without Members attending in person if the Board determines in its sole discretion that holding a Members' Meeting in person is not in the best interest of the Members or an in-person Members' Meeting cannot be held because of circumstances beyond the control of the Cooperative. A Members' Meeting held by the Cooperative where Members cannot attend in person may be broadcast or presented by video recording. However, if a Member vote is to take place at a Members' Meeting where Members cannot attend in person then the Members' Meeting shall be held utilizing technology that allows Members to be identified and communicate with all meeting participants remotely.

Words for the Woods: Tips for Hunters

We want to encourage all members to be aware of electrical equipment and take necessary precautions while hunting. Please keep safety in mind as you enjoy the great outdoors and don't forget to remind others to do the same.

Take notice of posted warning signs and keep clear of electrical equipment.

Be especially careful in wooded areas where power lines may not be as visible.

Do not shoot at or near power lines or insulators.

Do not place deer stands on utility poles or climb poles. Energized lines and equipment can conduct electricity to anyone who comes in contact with them, causing shock or electrocution.

Know where power lines and equipment are located on the land where you hunt.

Do not place decoys on power lines or other utility equipment. Any nonelectrical equipment attached to a pole can pose an obstruction and serious hazard to our line crews.

NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION DAY

September 22, 2020

Make Your Voice Heard

THERE'S AN OLD political saying, “if you’re not at the table, you’re on the menu.” This adage is the perfect answer to the question “why vote?” It’s a blunt description of what happens when you don’t engage in the political process.

If you don’t vote, you’re not only missing the opportunity to support a candidate that shares your views and concerns, you’re allowing others to chart a course that impacts your future. That’s why we’re encouraging all Houston County Electric Cooperative members to recognize National Voter Registration Day on September 22. Whether you’re registering yourself or others to vote, or helping members of our community organize, there are many ways to get involved.

Voting holds elected officials accountable. Elections are a direct and tangible source of feedback. For example, Houston County EC board members provide strategic guidance on the direction of the co-op and how it serves the community. Local board members embody the voice and identity of the community.

Staying in Sync With the Community

Ultimately the role of the co-op’s board is governance. While day-to-day decisions are made by our employees, bigger decisions are made by the board, whose mission is to look out for the vitality of the co-op and the members we serve. Houston County EC board members provide their perspective on community priorities, thereby enabling us to make more informed decisions on long-term investments.

A strong voter turnout shows investment in the community and ensures that diverse views are represented. The whole community benefits when more people participate in the process, because greater numbers reflect a consensus on the direction of the future and the will of the people.

By voting in national, state and local elections, you are serving as a role model for your family, friends and colleagues. The act of voting demonstrates your support for the community and helps officials chart a course for the future. Democracy is not a spectator sport. Research candidates, learn about issues that are on the ballot, and get out and vote.

Don't Fuel the Fire

Wildfires start unexpectedly and move quickly and unpredictably, destroying everything in their path.

If fire is reported nearby:

Place vital records and small items of value in your car and park it facing the direction of escape. Heed evacuation orders.

Clear a fire break around buildings.

Shut gas off at meter and turn off propane tanks.

Leave the electricity on, especially if it powers a well.

Turn on sprinklers. Wet down the house and shrubs close to structures.

Prevention:

Mow grass short. Rake leaves. Clear away debris.

Keep hay bales and firewood away from structures and electric lines.

Make a family evacuation plan. Have an inventory of home valuables in fireproof box.

Your electric cooperative encourages you to always practice safety.

More and more Americans are reaching the age where mobility is an everyday concern. Whether from an injury or from the aches and pains that come from getting older—getting around isn't as easy as it used to be. You may have tried a power chair or a scooter. The Zinger is NOT a power chair or a scooter! The Zinger is quick and nimble, yet it is not prone to tipping like many scooters. Best of all, it weighs only 47.2 pounds and folds and unfolds with ease. You can take it almost anywhere, providing you with independence and freedom.

Years of work by innovative engineers have resulted in a personal electric vehicle that's truly unique. They created a battery that provides powerful energy at a fraction of the weight of most batteries. The Zinger features two steering levers, one on either side of the seat. The user pushes both levers down to go forward, pulls them both up to brake, and pushes one while pulling the other to turn to either side. This enables great mobility, the ability to turn on a dime and to pull right up to tables or desks. The controls are right on the steering lever so it's simple to operate, and its exclusive footrest swings out of the way when you stand up or sit down. With its rugged yet lightweight aluminum frame, the Zinger is sturdy and durable yet convenient and comfortable! What's more, it easily folds up for storage in a car seat or trunk. Think about it, you can take your Zinger almost anywhere, so you don't have to let mobility issues rule your life. It folds in seconds without tools and is safe and reliable. Outside Influence

The beauty and joy of painting the Texas landscape en plein air

BY BRENDA KISSKO • ILLUSTRATION BY MATTHEW COOK

THE TEXAS LANDSCAPE is difficult to summarize. Its mountains rise tall, its canyons drop deep. It boasts red dirt, beach sand and limestone; mesquites, oaks and longleaf pines. Rivers, beaches and lakes; hills, plains and desert. When words fail to contain it, art succeeds.

For generations, artists have documented the landscape of the state, capturing its essence with vibrant pastels, soft watercolors and luxuriant oils. The specific practice of painting en plein air, French for “in open air,” is a tradition that allows the artist to engage with and respond to the natural world. Events such as San Angelo’s annual EnPleinAirTexas also allow art appreciators to engage in the creative process by observing artists at work.

During EnPleinAirTexas in 2015, San Angelo-area rancher Gretchen Noelke observed artist Patrick Saunders working at his easel. “Several of his paintings really said something to me,” Noelke recalls. The next year during EnPleinAirTexas, she invited Saunders to paint on her ranch, which has been in her family for more than 160 years.

Saunders headed out to Noelke’s ranch expecting to paint cattle. Instead, he found a natural scene—a tree looming over a draw—that inspired him.

“If it’s a good plein air painting, the viewer not only sees the scene that you’ve painted, but they get a sense of the actual experience that you had with that subject,” Saunders says. The artist’s reaction to a fast-moving storm or a brilliant sunset will be expressed in the way the paint is applied, he explains. “It is about the emotion that comes from being right there,” he says.

En plein air is not a style of painting, explains Donald Demers, the 2019 EnPleinAirTexas awards judge. Rather, it is a discipline that dates back to the 1500s. “Styles range far and wide,” Demers says, noting that the best-known practitioners were French impressionists.

EnPleinAirTexas is a juried competition that, in its seventh year, is the state’s largest. More than 150 artists from across the country apply to compete, but only 30 individuals are selected to join the previous year’s winners to work in San Angelo for the week. Four winners receive cash prizes totaling $20,000. The event, October 18–25 this year, includes opportunities for visitors to watch the artists painting at sites around San Angelo. At the end of the week, the paintings go up for sale, and 40% of sales support the San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts.

Barbara Rallo, an artist and event co-chair, was inspired to start EnPleinAirTexas after her travels to similar events. “When you paint outside, your eye sees more,” Rallo says. A shadow that appears black in a photograph appears to be a combination of colors when you’re outside, she says. “Painting outdoors actually trains you to be a better artist, even if you continue to paint in your studio.”

Saunders explains that visitors and collectors get very excited about the event because they will see paintings that are about their lives and about their environment. “When you see a painting being created, you suddenly feel like you were a part of that creation experience,” he says.

EnPleinAirTexas continues a legacy that began decades ago. The Texas Artists Camp in Christoval, 20 miles south of San Angelo, was the first major plein air artist event in Texas. The camp, founded by local bluebonnet painter Mollie Crowther, was active 1921–1927. In those seven years, the camp attracted the state’s top artists.

Howard Taylor, director of the San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts, says that in America, landscapes became a major subject of paintings in the last half of the 19th century. During those years, artists turned their attention away from religious and historical subjects.

“Landscape has been very much more important in America than other countries because they had history, yet we had the grandeur of nature,” says Taylor.

Saunders is one of the many artists documenting the grandeur of Texas. He painted Gretchen’s Oasis that day on Noelke’s ranch, and she purchased it. “I bought it so I can give it to my grandchildren,” she says, “and they can see what the ranch means to their grandmother.” ■

Davy Crockett's Fiddle

Did the Alamo legend and frontiersman have musical chops?

BY GENE FOWLER • ILLUSTRATION BY JOHN A. WILSON

DAVID CROCKETT'S frontier celebrity arrived in San Antonio before he entered the city on February 5, 1836. The 1833 book Sketches and Eccentricities of Col. David Crockett of West Tennessee and the 1831 New York stage play The Lion of the West established his public image with more tall tales of wilderness exploits than truth about his accomplishments. As a three-term congressman from Tennessee, he'd been courted as a possible presidential candidate before he told his constituents that they could go to hell and he'd go to Texas.

After Crockett died at the Alamo, his legend grew like wildfire. And more than a century later, as the 1955 Disney film Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier inspired coonskin cap mania, the Crockett story remained a swirling churn of folklore and fact. That same year, country-western singer Red River Dave McEnery recorded When Davy Crockett Met the San Antonio Rose with a fiddle that reportedly had belonged to Crockett himself. But as Alamo researcher William Groneman III, author of David Crockett: Hero of the Common Man, observes, "We don't really know for sure that it was Crockett's instrument or that he even played the fiddle."

Curators at San Antonio's Witte

TCM WEB EXTRA

Listen to the strains of the Witte Museum's Crockett fiddle.

Museum, which has possessed and periodically exhibited the fiddle since 1934 (it was lent in 1934 and formally donated to the museum in 1950), have always been careful to qualify that the instrument was reportedly owned by Crockett. Documents on file at the Witte track the fiddle's acquisition in 1934 by San Antonio Mayor C.K. Quinn from T.S. Quinn (no relation), an Alabama violin maker and repairman. The affidavits further state that Quinn obtained the fiddle from one Frank Hollis of Tennessee, whose father had obtained it from David Crockett's son, Joseph Crockett. But Davy Crockett did not have a son named Joseph.

Further—and equally uncertain—indication of ownership is penciled inside the instrument: "This fiddle is my property, Davy Crockett, Franklin County, Tenn. Feb. 14, 1819."

The earliest mention historians have found of Crockett playing a fiddle in San Antonio—or anywhere else for that matter—is a quote from Alamo survivor Susanna Dickinson published in James M. Morphis' 1875 volume, History of Texas, from its Discovery and Settlement, that Crockett often took up his violin and "played his favorite tunes" during the siege. While it appears certain that Crockett did not tote the Witte's instrument to the Alamo, another Davy fiddle that could have been played during the siege surfaced in 1936.

John Houston Thurman of Longview, described in news reports as "an 80-year-old drover" and "an oil field fiddler," displayed an instrument his father had obtained in Mexico while fighting in the Mexican War. Carved into the fiddle's neck was "D. Crockett. Tenn. 1835. D. C. Texas, 1836." ■

Game Day Eats

We've got you covered, from tailgating to the fourth quarter

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

Forget crunchy leaf piles, cozy sweaters and apple cider. In Texas, fall means football—a tradition we hope continues this year. Even if tailgating isn't an option this season, game day snacks are still a great opportunity to try new twists on favorite dishes. These chicken wings allow time to prep other snacks or catch some of the game while they bake. The plum jam adds a touch of sweetness, with even my 6-year-old gobbling these up.

Sticky Plum Chicken Wings

3 pounds chicken wings

½ cup plum jam

⅓ cup soy sauce

¼ cup water

1 green onion, diced, white and green parts divided

2 tablespoons rice vinegar

2 tablespoons chopped fresh ginger

2 large garlic cloves, chopped

1–2 teaspoons chili garlic sauce or other hot sauce

COOK'S TIP I've used chili garlic sauce for a light heat, but you can use your favorite hot sauce to taste.

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil, then top with a wire baking rack (or use a broiler pan). Coat lightly with nonstick spray and arrange chicken on top. Bake 35 minutes.

2. While the chicken bakes, make the sauce. In a small saucepan, whisk together jam, soy sauce, water, white parts of green onion, rice vinegar, ginger, garlic and chili garlic sauce and simmer over medium heat. Cook until reduced by half, whisking occasionally, about 15 minutes.

3. When chicken is done, put pieces into a large bowl. Pour sauce over chicken and toss gently with tongs to fully coat, then put chicken wings back onto the baking pan and cook an additional 5–10 minutes, letting the sauce caramelize. Remove to a plate and garnish with remaining green onion.

Chili is always a crowd-pleaser. This flavorful recipe gets a boost from cascabel chile sauce, which can easily be doubled to use for enchiladas or pork stew, says Avila. Serve the chili with onions and cheese or enjoy it atop hot dogs or corn chips.

SERVES 8

- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 2 cups diced onion, divided use
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 1 pound bulk chorizo
- 1 can (10.5 ounces) chili sauce
- 1 can (15 ounces) pinto beans, drained
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1½ teaspoons garlic powder
- 1½ teaspoons onion powder
- 1½ teaspoons oregano
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- ½ teaspoon cumin
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 tablespoon crushed red pepper flakes, optional
- 1 tablespoon cayenne pepper, optional
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 4 cascabel chiles
- 2 large cloves garlic
- 2 cups water
- Shredded cheddar cheese, for topping

1. Into a stock pot or Dutch oven set over medium heat, pour the vegetable oil. When the oil is hot, add 1 cup diced onion and sauté until softened, about 5 minutes.
2. Add ground beef and chorizo and cook until browned. Stir in chili sauce, pinto beans, chili powder, garlic powder, onion powder, oregano, seasoned salt, cumin and bay leaf. Add crushed red pepper flakes and cayenne pepper, if using, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and let simmer on medium-low while you make the red sauce.
3. To make the red sauce, remove stems and seeds from cascabel chiles, then rinse under warm water. Add to a small saucepan with garlic and cover with water. Bring to a boil and let simmer for 10 minutes, or until chiles are soft. Let cool slightly, then pour chiles, garlic and cooking water into a blender and purée, taking care to let steam escape. Strain if desired, then stir into chili.
4. Cook chili another 5 minutes to let flavors meld, then serve with remaining diced onion and cheddar cheese.

Sweet and Spicy Pretzel and Nut Mix

BARBARA REISS
PEDERNALES EC

It will be hard to keep from diving into this snack mix while it cools. Fragrantly spiced with just a bit of heat, it will stay fresh for about a week when stored in an airtight container.

4 cups mixed raw nuts, such as pecans, almonds and cashews

- 1/3 cup dark brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons maple syrup
- 2 tablespoons (1/4 stick) butter, melted
- 1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4–1 teaspoon cayenne pepper, to taste
- 4 cups unsalted pretzels
- 2 teaspoons kosher salt

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a large rimmed baking sheet with foil or parchment. Spread the nuts in an even layer and bake about 10 minutes, turning the sheet and stirring halfway through, just until the nuts are lightly toasted and become fragrant.

2. While the nuts are toasting, place the brown sugar, maple syrup, melted butter, cocoa and spices in a large bowl and stir to combine. Pour in the warm nuts and stir until well coated.

3. Add in the pretzels and salt, and stir until thoroughly blended and coated, taking care not to break up pretzels. Spread the mixture onto the baking sheet. Bake 12–15 minutes, stirring twice during baking and watching to make sure nuts do not burn.

4. Remove from the oven and let cool completely on the pan before storing in an airtight container.

Fronds in High Places

Sabal Palm Sanctuary in Brownsville brings hikers into archaic avian grove

BY CHET GARNER

THE PLANTS AROUND ME were so thick that I could barely see beyond the hiking trail. Above me, the fronds of native, 50-foot palm trees swayed with the breeze. Suddenly the green canopy overhead erupted into a squawking symphony so loud I thought I was being attacked. I wanted to run for my life. Instead I calmly looked up to see a flock of birds dancing atop the palms. My pocket guide identified them as chachalacas. It was the first of more than two dozen bird species I would identify that day.

I was hiking along the trails of the Sabal Palm Sanctuary, a 557-acre preserve operated by the Gorgas Science Foundation in southeast Brownsville, near the southernmost point in Texas. This refuge was part of a sugar cane plantation in the 19th century, when steamboats churned along the nearby Rio Grande. The sanctuary's visitors center sits inside the immaculate Rabb Plantation House that was built in 1892 and is worth a visit on its own. However, most visitors don't stay long in the mansion, as they're eager to hit the 3 miles of trails and identify avian species they can add to their birding life list.

Hiking below the palms was an experience that transported me to a tropical environment that seemed more likely to be in a different part of the world. Sabal palms, particularly native ones, are rare in Texas. This grove is the last piece left of a native palm forest that once extended 80 miles inland, throughout the Rio Grande Valley. As I stood on the Rio Grande observation deck without a fence or a building in sight, it wasn't hard to imagine a world without humans, where palm trees prosper and chachalacas can scream to their hearts' content. ■

Meadow Oasis

Serene evenings at a vacant lot given over to nature leave the author grounded and grateful

BY SHERYL SMITH-RODGERS
ILLUSTRATION BY ANDREA COBB

JAMES CARRIES the lawn chairs. I follow behind with Prima, a sweet calico who claimed us not long after we buried our last elderly cat. Behind a low cedar-post fence, we unfold our chairs and plop down. Prima chooses a lap and nestles into a comfortable position.

Overhead, cedar waxwings fly across the open sky followed by some black-bellied whistling-ducks and a lone white-winged dove. With our feet propped up on the fence, we breathe in the evening air and gaze at what we call the Meadow, our adjoining vacant lot turned nature preserve.

Our evening “sits” in the Meadow go back more than a decade. Through the years, we’ve observed change, loss and rejuvenation. One spring, prairie verbena laid a purple carpet across the property. That show has yet to be repeated. Another year, stiff green-threads bloomed in golden profusion—until coreopsis leaf beetles decimated their foliage. And we still talk about the Malta starthistle that grew in thick clumps along the street—then I learned we were hosting a nasty invasive. Garbage bags later, we finally eradicated the species. Gray vervain, fleabane, silverleaf nightshade and other natives grow there now.

This evening, we admire the abundant bluebonnets that grace our corner lot. Sulphurs, honeybees and an occasional white-lined sphinx moth flit among the blue flower heads. From our chairs, we wave at a couple walking their dog. Chat with a father who has brought his toddler son to see the wildflowers. Holler greetings at a nearby neighbor who tells us how much she loves her view of the Meadow.

It could be just another evening in our neighborhood. Only it’s not. Because a global pandemic keeps us apart. We must social distance and share air hugs.

Prima yawns and jumps down to nibble grass. James tracks a miniscule fly across the darkening sky. I lean over to watch a wolf spider scuttle through the grass. Virus or no virus, our sits in the Meadow keep us grounded and grateful. Our time there reminds us that we, too, as human beings, will always experience change, loss and rejuvenation. Like our vacant lot turned nature preserve, we will adapt and move on. That’s the cycle of life. ■
